National College Health Assessment

We are excited to share that the National College Health Assessment has officially launched and we want our students to know to "Raise your Voice – Elevate Campus Health." The NCHA is a survey through the American College Health Association that we distribute every 2 years and assesses all parts of student health and well-being. This data is used to inform programs and service delivery, opportunities for growth, and areas that we need to focus on collectively as a campus. Check out this wonderful blog post written by Jenna Templeton to learn more.

What can you do to help? We know that connecting with students this past year has been challenging and we appreciate all the ways you can help get the word out and let students know that their voice matters. Marketing materials are available and you can help get the word out. In addition to following the Center for Student Wellness on social media @uofuwellness, please email them at wellness@sa.utah.edu.
