Pride Week 2012

Brief description of program: For the 2012 University Pride Week, there was nearly daily tabling, a documentary and panel, two theatrical performances, and other activities like the Pride Pet Pageant, and a drag show. All events were open to students, staff, faculty, and community members.

Who was asked to complete survey: All students, staff, faculty, and community members who attended any of our Pride Week events were asked to complete the surveys for each event that they attended.

Respondents: 46
Administration Type: Paper, with LGBTRC staff entering responses into Campus Labs.

Summary of Key Findings: All of the events were well attended, and there was more attendance than last year (excluding the respondent numbers, some events were not evaluated). Students, staff, faculty, and community members really enjoyed the Spoken Word artists and immigration panel, because many said they could relate to it on some level (i.e. age of artists/panelists, discussions presented, etc.)

The LGBTRC’s desires to understand, advocate, and educate on the intersectionality of identities has proved successful in garnering support from diverse walks of life.

Actions Taken: We are refining marketing strategies in order to garner more support and interest.
